In an economy where most markets are in steady decline, the property market continues to show rapid growth. That's what makes starting a property managing agency a great business opportunity in South Africa. Managing agencies have great flexibility and income-generating potential. It can be a one-person business operated from home, or a large organisation with regional offices, dedicated service departments and connections to a wide variety of specialist service providers.

The Start and Manage a Sectional Title Managing Agency online short course, presented by Paddocks, focuses on 'managing agency' as a business. Topics covered during the eight-week course include, an explanation of why managing agency is an attractive business, an overview of the laws that apply, the formalities of starting a business, business planning, financial and staff management, marketing, and building the business.

Paddocks is an industry leading specialist sectional title and home owners' association firm that provides online education related to the management of community schemes.
