MyWorld of Tomorrow gets gold sponsorship from AccessData

AccessData is the gold sponsor for the MyWorld of Tomorrow (MWOT), taking place 16-18 October 2014 at the Sandton Convention Centre. The conference and exhibition is one of Africa's pioneer platforms for interaction and knowledge sharing in the technology and innovation space.

Development of the technology sector

Garreth Scott, Regional Manager, Africa, India, Qatar & UAE at AccessData Group says, "The development of Africa is inextricably linked to the development of the technology sector across the region. We believe that events like this will play a critical role in creating a roadmap for technological advancement and we are delighted to be a part of and support this revolutionary vision. The event also gives us a great opportunity to educate attendees about the need to implement intuitive incident response solutions such as the company's ResolutionOne Platform as a measure to protect against increasing cybercrime."

Resolution platform

MWOT will feature a 'Launch and Demonstration' zone for demonstrations of ResolutionOne Platform, a continuous, automated incident resolution platform, delivering the workflows and capabilities necessary to detect, analyse and resolve any data incident or breach across endpoints, networks and mobile devices.

"The corporate sector in this region demands the capability to conduct their own in-house digital investigations, as well as in-house rapid detection and response to defend against hackers, malware and advanced persistent threats. They want the control to oversee their infosec environments for improved data intelligence of their alerts, endpoints and network to efficiently remediate incidents and monitor for future threats. This is where our technology is relevant and becoming increasingly popular," concludes Lucas Zaichkowsky Enterprise Defense Architect at AccessData.
