

The 'terrorist shopping list' - has WikiLeaks gone too far?

By Sipho Hlongwane: @comradesipho

7 Dec 2010

On Sunday, 5 December 2010, WikiLeaks published what may yet prove to be the most controversial cable yet - a list of facilities around the world that the US government considers vital to its national security. Some of WikiLeaks' media partners have balked at publishing or otherwise drawing attention to the cable

Others have dubbed it a perfect shopping list for terrorists seeking to harm US interests.

The cable is a response to a request sent out by the US State Department, asking its missions abroad to list all the facilities in each country that were to be considered vital to US national security. The list is broad and encompasses plants, medical facilities, laboratories and transportation facilities around the world.

Has WikiLeaks finally gone too far?

Continue reading the full article on www.thedailymaverick.co.za.

ABOUT SIPHO HLONGWANE: @COMRADESIPHO

A proud Zulu who hails from the KwaZulu-Natal Midlands, Sipho Hlongwane is a self-taught journalist who now writes for The Daily Maverick (www.thedailymaverick.co.za). Email him at sipho@thedailymaverick.co.za and follow him on Twitter at @comradesipho.

- Why playing it straight and true always wins - 13 Nov 2015
- Committee to Protect Journalists blasts Protection of State Information Bill - 12 Dec 2011
- Cosatu, R2K, SANEF to work together against Secrecy Bill - 1 Dec 2011
- Secrecy Bill and the Constitutional Court - 24 Nov 2011
- Mac against the media wall - 23 Nov 2011

View my profile and articles...

For more, visit: <https://www.bizcommunity.com>